Dear Ms. Bui,

I am writing to you directly as the managing partner of H Bui Law Firm to raise a matter of urgent institutional concern regarding the handling of Nuha Sayegh's case (No. 21STFL04262) by your associate, Sara Memari. We have identified a pattern of systemic compliance failures that have not only caused significant financial harm to Ms. Sayegh but now also expose your firm to considerable vicarious liability and reputational risk.

This week, the opposing party, Freddy Sayegh, communicated his intent to unilaterally terminate Ms. Sayegh's health insurance coverage, a clear and actionable violation of the Automatic Temporary Restraining Orders (ATROs). This action, which necessitates an immediate ex parte application to prevent irreparable harm, is the latest in a series of critical missteps that point to a systemic lack of oversight and inadequate client communication protocols within your firm.

This ATRO violation is compounded by a previous incident on November 19, 2025, where Ms. Memari's failure to provide adequate disclosure regarding the limitations of remote testimony—a violation of California Rule of Professional Conduct 1.4(b)—resulted in the denial of a crucial court order and direct financial damages to Ms. Sayegh estimated between $8,000 and $15,000.

Furthermore, we are in possession of TIER 1 evidence, disclosed by the opposing party himself, that he has expended over $26,000 on legal fees in this matter. This financial disclosure, contrasted with Ms. Sayegh's reliance on public assistance, provides irrefutable justification for a fee-shifting motion and underscores the financial disparity that your firm's performance has so far failed to address.

As a Certified Family Law Specialist with a pristine 21-year record, you understand that these are not isolated errors but evidence of a systemic failure that falls squarely within the scope of your supervisory duties. The combination of a meritorious State Bar complaint, a clear malpractice claim with quantifiable damages, and an ongoing ATRO violation creates a multi-front crisis for your firm.

We believe in resolving this matter professionally and efficiently. Before we proceed with formal actions, we propose a "win-win" solution that allows your firm to mitigate this significant risk while ensuring Ms. Sayegh's case is put back on a path to success.

We propose that H Bui Law Firm provide the ghostwriting and filing services for the upcoming move-away RFO at no cost to Ms. Sayegh. In exchange for this institutional remedy, we will agree to defer the filing of a State Bar complaint against both Ms. Memari and your firm for the aforementioned compliance failures.

This offer is a strategic off-ramp that protects your firm's reputation and avoids a costly and public dispute. We are prepared to move forward with the ex parte application immediately and trust that under your supervision, it will be handled with the urgency and competence this situation demands.

We look forward to your prompt intervention and a swift, professional resolution.

Sincerely,

Eric Jones
