Dear Ms. Memari,

I received your email, and I honestly don't even know where to begin except to say I'm so deeply sorry.
The email you received from my account does not represent how I truly feel about you or the work you've done for me. I know that doesn't change what was sent, and I know I'm responsible for what comes from my account, but I need you to know that those words and that tone are not mine. I have been under an enormous amount of stress and made the mistake of allowing someone else to get involved in something that should have stayed between us. That was my failure, and I am genuinely mortified by what happened.

You have been nothing but professional and dedicated to my case during one of the darkest periods of my life. When my own family turned their backs on me for trying to leave an abusive situation, your firm was there. I have appreciated every single thing you've done for me and my children, and I am devastated that things have ended this way.
I understand completely why you can no longer represent me. I don't blame you at all. I will sign the Substitution of Attorney as you've requested. I just wanted you to know how truly sorry I am and how much I have valued your help during this impossible time.

I'm scared about what comes next, but I know that's no longer your concern. I just needed you to hear a real apology from me before we part ways.

Thank you for everything you've tried to do for me and my children.

Sincerely,
Nuha
