Hi Gary,

I hope this message finds you well. I am writing to discuss the parking situation at our building on Noel Drive. Before Carlos moved out, we tried to fit three cars in the parking space, but it was extremely challenging. The space does not accommodate three cars in a parallel fashion without significant difficulty. Each morning, it was a tight squeeze, and I ended up scratching my car twice on the adjacent wall.

Carlos mentioned that he managed because his car was smaller and he is slimmer. However, this won't be feasible for everyone, especially if the new tenant has a larger vehicle. To ensure safety and avoid damage, I believe it would be best to limit the driveway to two cars.

Additionally, the residential parking regulations indicate that the current space is insufficient for three cars. My spot, next to the wall, should have at least two extra feet of space to maneuver safely. Here is the link to the law.

Could we please discuss this further and find a solution that complies with the parking laws and prevents any potential damage to our vehicles?

Thank you for your understanding and cooperation.

Best regards,
Eric Jones

Eric

I cannot make the parking spaces any larger which are currently 10 feet wide as is required.

All the solutions are up to you.

1. Be more careful when you park.

2. Park on the street. I will pay for your parking permit.

or

3. You are welcome to move out and I will not hold you to the term of your lease.

I am sorry you are not happy with your apartment, but this is all I can do to address your concerns.

Hi Gary,

I appreciate your response.

To be clear I am very happy with the apartment and the whole set up and don't wish to leave. I simply want to park without danger to my car and comply with the law.

After reading your email I think I've identified the reason why we might be looking at this with different lenses. You wrote in your email that the parking spaces are 10 feet which is required. This is correct that they need to be 10 feet (actually if you're next to a wall like me its a little more) but currently my space is UNDER 8 feet. If I had 10 feet for my space I would not be complaining.

Since the space does not meet the required 10 feet do you now see why having 3 cars park there is concerning? I simply want to park in a space that meets the minimum requirement.

Please let me know.

Thank you,
Eric

Hi Gary,

I really appreciate you working on this with me. Honestly, the law is not my concern. It's not being able to park safely and risking damaging my car further.

Can you please confirm that we'll comply with the 10 foot parking space requirement/law? I understand the current allotted space is possibly due to a miscommunication between you and Ignacio as you acknowledged in your email you're aware of the space requirement. I'm just trying to make things right.

Please let me know.

Thank you,
Eric

Eric

It is what it is. Everyone has equal space. Let me know if you would like to park on the street. I will reimburse you for purchasing an on street parking permit from Temple City. I view this subject closed.
